Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its thirty-sixth session from 2 to 13 November 2020. The review of the United States of America was held at the 12th meeting, on 9 November 2020. The delegation of the United States of America was headed by Ambassador Andrew Bremberg, Permanent Representative of the United States of America to the Office of the United Nations and Other International Organizations in Geneva, Mr. Robert Destro, Assistant Secretary, Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights and Labor, United States Department of State and Mr. Marik String, Acting Legal Adviser, United States Department of State. At its 17th meeting, held on 13 November 2020, the Working Group adopted the report on the United States of America.

2. On 14 January 2020, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of the United States of America: the Bahamas, Germany and Pakistan.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of the United States of America:

   (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/36/USA/1);

These questions are available on the website of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. Co-head of delegation Ambassador Andrew Bremberg began by underscoring U.S. pride in its human rights record. The United States advocates strongly for the universal freedoms of religion or belief and expression, including for members of the press; and for the rights of individuals to assemble peaceably and to petition their government for a redress of grievances. He noted, for example, the U.S. launch in 2020 of the International Religious Freedom Alliance, joining 25 other member states to advance freedom of religion or belief around the world. The United States also joined 32 countries to sign the Geneva Consensus, a declaration of support for defending life and protecting the family.

6. Co-head of delegation Assistant Secretary Robert Destro said promoting human rights is a U.S. foreign policy priority that furthers its national interests of promoting stability and democracy. He noted the United States is firmly committed to finding meaningful remedies for claims of injustice at home. The demonstrations over the tragedy of George Floyd’s death... showed the world that Americans understand that they have the inherent right to raise their voices, individually and collectively, to demand that their government address their grievances.

7. Alexander Maugeri of the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) added that the government in the State of Minnesota had filed strong charges against four police officers for the death of Mr. Floyd. He underscored that while the vast majority of police officers in the United States do their job bravely and righteously, some officers have not lived up to their responsibilities, which has led some, particularly in the Black community, to have less confidence in the U.S. criminal justice system. Where there is misconduct by police officers or law enforcement agencies, however, state and federal law provides remedies. As of January 2020, DOJ had opened 70 civil investigations since 1994 into police departments that might have been engaging in a pattern or practice of conduct that deprives persons of their rights, such as the excessive use of force, improper searches, or improper stopping of persons. On June 16, 2020, President Donald J. Trump signed an Executive Order entitled “Safe Policing for Safe Communities” to develop and incentivize critical policing reforms.

8. Mr. Maugeri noted the U.S. federal government and most states in the United States have hate crime laws prohibiting violence motivated by race, color, religion, and national origin. Federal law and some state laws also prohibited violence motivated by gender, disability, sexual orientation, and gender identity. Mr. Maugeri noted that the United States does not criminalize speech, expressive conduct, or publication or advocacy of ideas, even those that others find extremely offensive or harmful. However, authorities act strongly when hateful expression turns into discrimination or violence, threats of violence, or solicitations to commit violence.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

9. During the interactive dialogue, 116 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

11. The third co-head of delegation, State Department Legal Adviser Marik String, noted the United States is a party to many human rights treaties and takes those obligations very seriously. He said the reasons for not ratifying additional treaties varies from treaty to treaty. He noted the role of the U.S. Senate, which in accordance with the U.S. Constitution has the sole authority to provide its advice and consent to treaty ratification through an affirmative vote by two-thirds of its members. In many cases, such as the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, U.S. domestic protections are even stronger than such treaties required. He underscored the U.S. commitment to effective implementation of its human rights obligations and welcomed continued input on how to improve it.

12. Sean Reyes, Attorney General for the State of Utah, underscored state-level efforts to promote human rights. He highlighted progress in Utah on racial justice, policing, indigenous rights, hate crimes, and trafficking in persons. He said Utah had taken significant steps to respond to and prevent incidents of excessive police force. For example, the state government had trained nearly 4,000 local, state, and federal officers in an immersive virtual reality system. He noted Utah had also prioritized combatting trafficking in persons, including amending laws to better protect victims and survivors, provide aftercare and recovery services, and empower survivors with educational and job opportunities.

13. James McCament of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) said DHS took seriously its role in ensuring proper implementation of U.S. immigration laws to protect the rights of Americans and foreign nationals in the United States. He noted mass illegal migration was unfair, unsafe, and unsustainable for everyone involved: the sending countries and the destination countries. He said recent years have seen a humanitarian and security crisis along the U.S. southern border due to a dramatic increase in the number of migrants. He said the Trump Administration took decisive action to strengthen the U.S. border system, address unintended consequences of laws and judicial rulings, and work with neighboring countries on regional concerns. Mr. McCament noted the United States had secured unprecedented cooperation with several countries to stem the flow of illegal immigration and had entered into border security arrangements with some of these countries to collaborate in disrupting and dismantling cartels responsible for human trafficking and drug smuggling. He said new asylum claims added to the lengthy backlog of pending claims in the U.S. system—now totaling over 1.1 million individuals. DHS has, however, introduced efficiency measures to maximize case processing. He said U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) tests all new detainees arriving at its detention facilities for COVID-19, and subsequently treats any positive cases, as part of the normal intake processing.

14. Lynn Grosso of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development noted that President Trump in June 2019 established the White House Council on Eliminating Barriers to Affordable Housing to remove obstacles that impede the production of affordable homes, to boost economic growth, and to provide economic mobility for more Americans. Ms. Grosso recounted how the U.S. Interagency Council on Homelessness released an updated strategic plan in October 2020, which focused on the root causes of homelessness and prioritized trauma-informed care to prevent and end homelessness. In its new strategic plan, the Council also promoted alternatives to criminalizing people experiencing homelessness through better partnerships between law enforcement and homeless service organizations, increased capacity of social work and mental health programs, and reducing recidivism among individuals experiencing homelessness. In 2020, Congress appropriated over $6.6 billion for homeless assistance programs.

15. Dr. Dorothy Fink of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) said the U.S. government is committed to improving its understanding of the impact of COVID-19 in minority populations who were often at higher risks for contracting the virus. Separately, Dr. Fink underscored the U.S. government’s commitment to suicide prevention and combating opioid misuse and abuse. She said HHS provides $286 million annually in grants to public and private organizations that offer a broad range of family planning methods and services, primarily to those from low income families. In addition, legislation passed in 2018 expanded the Safe Motherhood Initiative within HHS, including authorizing support for state and tribal Maternal Mortality Review Committees. She said the Protecting Life in Global Health Policy, in effect since May 2019, focuses U.S. discourse in multilateral settings toward achieving better health for women, preserving human life at all stages, strengthening the family as foundational to any healthy society, and protecting every nation’s national sovereignty in global politics.

16. Alison Kilmartin of the U.S. Department of Labor emphasized U.S. leadership on promoting equal opportunity for women. U.S. law prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex, including pregnancy, childbirth, and related medical conditions. Ms. Kilmartin said the United States is fully committed to ensuring equal employment opportunities in all sectors of the workforce. Through the White House’s Pledge to America’s Workers, job creators around the country had committed to more than 16 million new training, upskilling, or reskilling opportunities for America’s students and workers. Since January 2017, more than 800,000 people had entered apprenticeship programs registered with the Department of Labor or its state counterparts.

17. Charles Allen of the U.S. Department of Defense (DOD) said the United States has no current plans to close its facilities at Guantanamo Bay. He said only 40 individuals remain detained there. Since 2015, 68 individuals have been transferred from Guantanamo to other countries. Before each transfer, the United States receives assurances from the receiving governments that the detainee would be treated humanely after transfer. The Detainee Treatment Act of 2005 prohibits cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment of any “individual in the custody or under the physical control of the United States Government, regardless of nationality or physical location.” Mr. Allen said the United States took vigilant action to prevent such conduct and to hold any perpetrators accountable for their wrongful acts.

18. Mr. Allen said the U.S. military took scrupulous care to ensure that military and counterterrorism operations are conducted in accordance with all applicable domestic and international laws, in particular, the law of war. The longstanding policy of the U.S. military is to investigate alleged law of war violations by U.S. forces for which there is credible information, and to initiate prosecutions under U.S. law where appropriate. Mr. Allen said the U.S. military continues to believe that the option to use active duty U.S. military personnel in a law enforcement role should be exercised only as a matter of last resort as specified by law, and only in the most urgent and dire of circumstances.

19. Mr. Alexander Maugeri said the Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP) meet its constitutional and statutory mandates by confining inmates in prisons and community-based facilities that are safe, humane, and appropriately secure. He said the U.S. Constitution prohibits the use of solitary confinement in a manner that constitutes cruel and unusual punishment. He said DOJ was currently pursuing matters involving allegations of misuse of solitary confinement at the state and local levels throughout the country. He said BOP had also taken significant measures to reduce risks and mitigate the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. He noted President Trump’s December 2018 implementation of the First Step Act, the most significant federal criminal justice reform in several decades.

20. Mr. Maugeri said the U.S. judicial system provides exhaustive protections at both the federal and state levels to ensure that the death penalty is not applied in a summary, arbitrary, discriminatory, or inhumane manner, and that its implementation is undertaken with meaningful procedural safeguards, after access to multiple layers of judicial review, in conformity with the U.S. Constitution, federal law, and U.S. international obligations. DOJ continues to take great precautions to ensure decisions to seek the death penalty at the federal level are not based in any way on factors that include race or national origin.
21. Mr. String said the United States reaffirms its support for the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples as explained in its 2010 announcement of support. The United States continues to strengthen its government-to-government political relationship with U.S. federally recognized tribes, and meaningfully consults them when formulating broader policy objectives that could affect Native Americans.

22. Addressing comments made by member states, Mr. String reminded participants that the United States is not party to the Rome Statute that created the International Criminal Court, nor has the United States ever accepted its jurisdiction over U.S. personnel.

23. Addressing comments made on police brutality and remedies for racial discrimination, Mr. Destro said individuals and their families have access to state and federal courts to press for institutional changes and monetary damages.

24. Addressing comments on sexual and reproductive health, Mr. Destro noted abortion remains legal in the United States. He underscored that the United States rejects the proposition that abortion is a matter of international human rights and affirms that all lives, both born and unborn, should be protected.

25. Ambassador Bremberg closed the session by thanking member states for their constructive recommendations and reaffirming the U.S. commitment to creating a more perfect union.
